NEW CONGRESS EXPECTED TO BRING MILITARY TRAINING

Great Many Representatives and Senators Have Indorsed Principle in Poll by Security League.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—The National Security League announces today that as a result of a poll of the men who will sit in the 66th congress being conducted by it, the league has now on record definite commitments in favor of universal military training by 145 representatives and 22 senators.

In making public the results to date of its poll, the league emphasizes the fact that the league membership plan is purely on the basis of the principle of universal military training and not in advocacy of any particular plan for the enactment of such training. In its most recent poll letter, the league even asked each member of the 66th congress for suggestions as to the form of enactment. This letter reads:

"One of the basic tenets of the National Security League, as you may know, has been the adoption of a federal system of universal military training and instruction as the permanent basis of national defense. The league has, however, not pressed this matter during the past months, when active war work was the business of the nation, believing that universal military training will now again become a question of great public interest, the league would appreciate the viewpoint upon it of every member of the 66th congress."

"In the 66th congress, before the adoption of the selective draft, in response to various suggestions conducted by us, 42 senators and 116 representatives definitely committed themselves in favor of universal military training. Suggestions Asked.

"Whether or not you have previously expressed yourself upon this subject to the league, will you not kindly give us a brief statement of your views at the present time as to the enactment into law of universal military training, and as to the form you believe this enactment should take?"

This letter is signed by Lloyd Taylor, chairman of the Security League's "Universal Military Training Committee." Mr. Taylor is a wealthy retired importer of this city, who is now devoting his entire time to the chairmanship of this committee and the league's membership committee. He was the originator of the great preparedness parade in 1916 and of the mammoth universal military training petition to congress, containing nearly a million signatures from all parts of the country, which was presented by the league just after the declaration of war.

The figures used in Mr. Taylor's letter, 42 senators and 116 representatives, were of commitments of members of the present congress, the league, as explained in its letter to the men who will sit in the new congress, having refrained from pressing the question of universal military training while the nation had more immediate business at hand.

The league declares that it confidently expects that the total of the commitments in the sixty-sixth congress will far surpass those of the sixty-fifth congress, when the league had previously recorded in favor of universal military training, has indicated any change of view. The only congressman-elect who has declared himself against universal military training is M. O. McLaughlin, president of the York Business College, York, Neb., who defeated Congressman Sloan in the November elections. He writes the league:

"Wrecked Germany."

"I am opposed to fastening on this country the same system which has wrecked Germany and has brought untold suffering upon all the world. In my judgment, universal military training will wreck any nation that adopts it and pursue it."

Mr. McLaughlin makes a total of nine members of the new house of representatives definitely recorded by the Security League against universal military training. The others are: Congressman Huddleston, of Alabama; Hayden, of Arizona; Sears, of Arkansas; Crisp and Larsen, of Georgia; Sanders, of New York; and Saunders and Harrison, of Virginia.

The league has received to date definite opposition to universal military training from only three senators who will sit in the sixty-sixth congress, namely: Senators Kirby of Arkansas; Williams, of Mississippi; and Grinnell, of North Dakota. Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, is an opponent of universal military training, but he will be missing when the new roll is called.

The great majority of the letters received by the Security League in its poll last fall, however, were in favor of the country's unpreparedness for war and its experience in raising an army have strengthened the opinions of members of congress in favor of the adoption of universal military training as the permanent basis of the nation's defense. A few extracts from these letters follow:

"Pitiable Condition."

Congressman Mott, of New York—"I believe the war and our unpreparedness for it should have converted the opponents to universal military training."

Congressman Wood, of Indiana—"I hope we will never have another war, but if we do, the military forces of this country will have to be called into action, but in the event we should have to fight, I want our country prepared to meet it, and not be found in the pitiable condition that we were found in at the outbreak of this war. But, if there is never another war to engage us, universal military training will be worth more than its cost in the making of manhood and useful citizenship."

Congressman Johnson, of Washington, who left his seat in congress to join the army—"My experience in the army during the last few months has further convinced me of the desirability of military training for the youth of our lands. I hope that the United States may retain the cantonments already established and use them for the universal training establishment, together with the great amount of equipment and supplies on hand."

Senator Watson, of Indiana—"All my

Brings Trophies From War Zone

Corp. Theo. Stiffel.

Wearing a sharpshooter's medal and bringing several German trophies, Corp. Theo. Stiffel, of the First Marine aviation corps, has returned from France, where he saw active duty. He is now at his home, 263 Stonevale place.

Among other souvenirs from the battle front, Corp. Stiffel brought back the rifle of his closest friend who fell in battle. A German helmet is also among his trophies.

Corp. Stiffel enlisted in April, 1918, and saw active service soon afterward.

His military life has been in favor of military preparedness, especially a regular universal military training. I am in favor of universal military service, not alone for military preparedness, but for the training and discipline it will afford the young men of the country, thus better qualifying them for citizenship in a time of peace as well as preparing them for service in time of war."

Moral Effect.

Congressman-elect Cole, of the 8th Ohio district—"I had hoped, and still hope, that the great struggle just ended sounded the death knell to wars between or among civilized nations. But I am constrained to think that civilization has not yet attained to that standard of perfection where it would be the part of wisdom for a nation to disarm and depend upon universal humanitarianism. I am inclined to favor universal training, not only as a means of national defense but because of the excellent physical and moral effect upon the young men of the country."

Congressman Sanford, of New York—"I greatly fear that our success in this war will be misinterpreted to mean that we can exist without a military policy. It is to be hoped that the invaluable advantages of military training, that have come to the millions of men in the service will teach the lesson that physical fitness, training and discipline are assets in peace as well as in war."

Marine Chief of Staff Urges Nation to Retain Wounded

Maj.-Gen. George Barnett, Back in U. S. From France, Concerned Over Future Welfare of War Victims.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Dec. 24.—When Maj.-Gen. George Barnett arrived on the Leviathan from a three months' visit to France, he was full of pride over the fighting achievements of the boys in his forces and his praise of them was almost without limit. He is most concerned, however, over the future welfare of those who were wounded.

Gen. Barnett, who has been 30 years in the service of the marines, came back sure that they were the greatest fighting outfit in the world. They saved Paris, he asserted, for no one knows what would have happened had the Germans broke through their green line at Chateau Thierry that memorable July day when the "soldiers and sailors too" held fast and shattered the best shock lines that the enemy could send for them.

But—and this he insists upon in a proud, paternal way—those of them who were crippled, who were lame, even in that glorious victory must be cared for. They must not now be dismissed on the service of their country simply because of physical handicaps.

Would Retain Cripples.

"And I do not think they will be," he said at the Waldorf-Astoria before he departed for Washington. "I have advocated, and the surgeon-general and the secretary of the navy have agreed with me, that as many as possible of the wounded men be retained in the marine service. If they can not be used in the service, they may be transferred to barracks, at recruiting offices and for other light duties. And those who are really crippled should be housed and will be, I believe—in navy yards, naval construction works and so on."

"Many know almost nothing already. The others should be taught trades, be made into machinists, carpenters and other useful trades."

But I assure it will not. I have been told by the surgeon-general and the secretary of the navy that if any legislation is necessary to care for wounded marines it will surely be passed."

France Honors Marines.

All over France, in the big cities as well as the little hamlets, the people of our sister republics when they see a United States marine take off their hats and bow low to him. Gen. Barnett said: "France knows them not only as great fighters, but as brave, uncomplaining lads." He added: "If you lose a leg or an eye, if one loses an eye he laughs and says 'It's lucky it wasn't an arm. The simple can't be done, either in battle or in any other way.'"

Berlin Reichsbank President Resigns

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Dr. Rudolf Havenstein, president of the imperial bank of Germany (the reichsbank), has resigned, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen.

Dr. Havenstein became president of the reichsbank in December, 1907. The reichsbank, under his direction, had charge of German war finances. He has been a supporter of the pan-Germans.

Near As Possible.

Two shipwrecked sailors were on a desert island. They were utterly miserable, pinched with hunger and cold. The one more wretched than the other said to his companion, "Can you pray, Billy?"

"No, can you sing a hymn?"

"No," said the first, "let's have something religious; let's have a collection."

SINN FEIN'S BIG VICTORY IN IRELAND SURPRISES PARTY

DUBLIN, Dec. 24.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The Sinn Fein victory over the nationalists in the recent parliamentary elections exceeded the highest hopes of the Sinn Fein.

It is believed that when the final count is made on Dec. 28 the Sinn Fein will have won a majority of the Irish seats. In fact, before the election they had gained 25 seats because the nationalists did not oppose them.

The Sinn Fein, elected will not take their seats. They will forfeit the £100 which they had to post as an election fee, and which is returnable only when a member takes his oath and his seat.

Their immediate purpose, according to one of their most prominent leaders, is to convolve an Irish nationalist assembly early in January. The assembly would draft a national constitution for Ireland, which would be laid before a conference of all nations.

Complete separation of a republic wholly independent of Great Britain is loudly claimed by some Sinn Fein leaders. Various plans have been suggested to bring about home rule, but none has substantial backing from any organized party in Ireland.

In Ulster, Cardinal Logue was a leader in organizing opposition to the Sinn Fein. He and the Catholic bishops and others, he allotted the eight doubtful seats in Ulster equally between the Sinn Fein and the nationalists and called upon the supporters of each party to vote against the Catholics.

CHICKASHA, Okla., Dec. 24.—An investigation to fix the blame for Wednesday's wreck on the Pryor road at Norge, Okla., near here, in which five persons were killed and 27 injured, was begun today by officials of the road. Seconding the announcement of the probe to investigate the accident was the announcement of a probe to be made by the county attorney of Grady county, who promised that charges of negligence would follow if evidence of negligence was uncovered.

Frank Higgins, the fireman, upon whom rested the responsibility of flagging the freight train which crashed into the "stalled" passenger train, is being held by railroad officials. Frederick H. Adkins, engineer of the freight, declared emphatically to road officials that no signal was set against his train to warn of the nearness of the passenger coaches.

Before arriving he was with a surviving outfit in Mississippi, bearing to be a civil engineer. When the Mexican trouble arose he volunteered with the Fifth Nebraska regiment and served in Mexico with that unit.

SAFE ARRIVAL OF "LOST" VESSEL IS CONFIRMED

LONDON, Dec. 24.—The safe arrival at Algiers lay, an African port, of the American sailing ship Brynhild, previously reported as lost, was confirmed by Lloyd's today.

The Brynhild sailed from New York Sept. 27. Two days later a Hebe from the ship was found off the American coast. Later naval craft found another of the ship's cargo. It was generally believed she had struck a mine and sunk.

The vessel was in command of Capt. J. S. Kennedy, of Malden, Mass., and carried a crew of 21.

TREE BURNS WHILE FAMILY IS FEASTING

While the family of Paul Waggoner, 614 Mississippi avenue, was at dinner at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night, the four-foot Christmas tree in the dining room caught fire and burned a magnificent table, a valuable sofa and rug before it could be extinguished. Damage estimated at $200.

It is supposed to have started from a candle on the tree. Waggoner, who is a Berlin expert at central police headquarters, says his son, Andrew B. Waggoner, who is now in the army, was the one who lit the tree.
